SECOND MIDTERM REVIEW SESSION

Dear Students,

Our second midterm exam is right around the corner, and by popular demand we will be holding a review session.

As with sections and office hours the class as a whole needs to be the driving force behind our work in the review session.

This is how it works:

1. Think about the material we have covered and using the problem sets as a guide generate your own exam review questions

2. Reply to this email message with your exam review question(s) and answer(s) (you do not have to provide an answer!) Please submit by Thursday evening.

3. We will compile the questions into a "practice exam" and email it back out Friday morning

4. During the review you will work in small groups and go over the material collectively. It will be your job as a team to work through the questions helping each other along the way. Hossein and myself will float through the different groups and assist as necessary.

If everyone in the class sends in one question you will have enough material to stay busy all evening long. We as TA's will not make up questions, it is your responsibility! The review session will be as good or bad as you make it.

Bring lots of extra scrap paper, whiteboards are a major bonus if you have them. If possible you may work on the black/white boards in the room.

Time and location:
Friday November 4, 2011
7:00PM to 9:00PM
Room: Nat Sci Annex 101

Although there was a strong student turnout to our last review we did not receive nearly enough questions. Don't let it happen again!

Sincerely,
Eric and Hossein
